

Honor Their Sacrifice

In an instant, an IED blast, a sniper's bullet, or other war-related incident steals a warrior's self sufficiency. Families respond with passion and dedication - pouring themselves into the healing and care of their loved one. In the process, they often leave behind a life of normalcy to live a life filled with financial challenges, medical procedures, rehabilitative therapy, and assisting their wounded warrior with activities of daily living. (e.g., dressing, eating, toileting, etc.)

Join us as we deliver much needed community support to these families whose lives now revolve around the daily care for their catastrophically wounded warrior.

Family Caregivers

Doing all they can

Big problems take big solutions. We have a big problem when it comes to the quality of life many families face after their service member suffers catastrophic injuries and is left unable to live independently.

While federal programs, services and compensations meet some needs; others remain unaddressed or underserved.

Taking Care of Heroes

With love and devotion

For example, family caregivers often provide daily rehabilitative therapy for their loved one and provide assistance with activities of daily living - leaving little time to take care of other family and household responsibilities.

Parent caregivers often leave their jobs to care for their wounded son or daughter and forfeit their income, as well as, health, dental, and life insurances. Many exhaust their savings to meet living expenses; others face more severe financial challenges. Home modifications frequently cost more than VA housing grants cover.

Minor children face emotional challenges but their parents need logistical help to get them to a professional who can help.

They Are Heroes Too

And we want to help

Many hands make light work; let's work together to show our gratitude.

Sometimes, it is as simple as the lawn needs to be mowed, but there is no one with the time or energy to do it.

Americans want to help. We can show them how.

Our country owes a great debt to these families in gratitude for their sacrifices. Let's work together to show them they are heroes too.
